

Leadership for Equity And Diversity in Special- Education-Administrators (LEADS)

Receive tuition and support as part of a doctoral cohort of leaders dedicated to equity and diversity in special education

ASU's Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College is seeking seven special education leaders to be a part of a grant-funded Leadership for Equity And Diversity in Special-Education-Administrators (LEADS) cohort in our EdD program beginning May 2022.

Competitive applicants will:

- Be employed in a position providing services to culturally and linguistically diverse individuals with disabilities in grades PreK–12. This employment should allow you to study problems of practice in special education and implement change in the workplace.
- Have a bachelor's degree, master's degree or licensure in special education or related field
- Have a master's degree from an accredited institution with a 3.0 in the last 60 credit hours
- Have U.S. citizenship or lawful permanent residency
- Live in AZ or be able to travel frequently to AZ for in-person seminars. Courses will be delivered in a hybrid format, taking place online and on-site at ASU's West campus in Glendale, Arizona.

Members of the LEADS cohort will:

- Receive funding to cover the cost of tuition, fees, materials and travel
- Work with faculty mentors to develop career goals and strengthen leadership skills
- Earn an EdD in Leadership and Innovation from Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College

The pre-application deadline is Jan. 31, 2022

Learn more: education.asu.edu/LEADS

For specific questions, contact:

Kevin Laack
Director of Recruitment, Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College
Arizona State University
GradEducation@asu.edu
602-543-3434