State budget shortfalls during recessions

Center on Budget and Policy Priorities - CBPP.org

“Though the mix varies from state to state, tax dollars raised in states fund essential services — and tax cuts at a time when revenues are weak place those services at risk.”

artlook® Virtual & Online Programs

Program Directory

Organizations

This free directory of online arts education programs is designed to support the arts education community's shift to virtual learning. Arts partner organizations from across the country have shared their online learning classes, programs, lesson plans, and more to support teachers and families as we navigate the COVID-19 outbreak together.

The information contained in this site represents a portion of the wealth of information available through the artlook® platform. Only organizations that have provided information on virtual programming available during the 2019-20 or 2020-21 school years are represented here. Visit one of our partner communities to learn more about all the arts education information the artlook® platform makes available.

Use the Organizations tab to learn more about organizations across the country that offer programs to schools in our artlook® partner communities. Use the Program Directory tab to learn more about all the programs these partners offer. Inside, you'll find:

Resources for Creating Online Learning

Get inspired to create online learning experiences by watching these students in an online improv class who were challenged to design an improv around a virtual help desk for returns. Scroll down the page for more extensive resources for creating online learning.

Top Ten Tips for Teaching Theatre Online

1. Start by surveying your students: what technology do they have access to? how can they communicate with you? Consider spending the first online class going over how to use the technology together. Plan to communicate as often as possible to keep students feeling a part of the classroom community: office hours, text messages, emails, one on one sessions, etc. This is article offers a list of available free wi-fi services as of spring 2020.
